ABOUT

Djâmen is an arranger, producer, composer and multi-instrumentalist. He blends it all into a unique contemporary avant-garde sound that is extensively informed by, but also deeply conscious of its role in Brazilian Afroindigenous representation in the global music scene.

Djâmen's upbringing was steeped in music. His mother, a classical pianist, and his father is one of the creators of the Samba-Rock genre, which gained worldwide renown through Sergio Mendes and Jorge Ben's song "Mas Que Nada.". His family instilled in him a deep love for music. His guitar playing is heavily influenced by his uncle Luis Vagner, who was the first to play samba with an electric guitar. Today, based in Portugal, Djâmen carries this rich musical legacy forward, supporting great artists on big stages, and forging ahead with his own creative vision..

STORY

VISION

Djâmen's music brings strong messages on themes such as racism, black empowerment, self-development and immigration, all of which are entrenched in his journey.

Moved by his belief in the decolonisation of sound and ideas, Djâmen challenges single-gender approaches to music and mixes together elements of jazz, funk, soul and traditional brazilian music. He uses his art as a way to deconstruct pre-established rules that create separation, in favour of bringing people together and honouring all forms of expression. As a professor djâmen tries to unlock the musicality from his students using simple and intuitive language.

This achievement was a testament to Djâmen's musical prowess and opened doors for new and exciting opportunities. One of these opportunities arose when Djâmen graced the stage of The Voice Lithuania in January 2024, where they undoubtedly left a lasting impression.
